

BOSCH INTRODUCES SERIES OF UNIVERSAL INDOOR/OUTDOOR CAMERA HOUSINGS

June 25, 2007

Fairport, N.Y. – Bosch Security Systems, Inc., a full-line manufacturer of high-quality security solutions, today introduced a new line of universal camera housings that improve protection and make camera and lens installation easier. The tamper-resistant UHI/UHO Series housings are rated IP66 and NEMA4X, assuring well-built protection against water access and extreme temperature changes in rugged environments. In addition, the new housing series feature a hinged side opening for easy installation and camera setup. The new housings accommodate Bosch Dinion and Megapixel cameras as well as those from other manufacturers including fixed focal, varifocal or up to a 15x motorized zoom lens.

The side-opening design of the UHI/UHO housings give the installer improved access to camera and lens controls while the housing is mounted. Tamper-resistant screws on the locking clasps prevent unwanted entry and improve camera security. In addition, power, video and lens control cabling may be routed through liquid-tight fittings in the bottom rear of the housing or using feed-through entry holes in the housing base.

UHO (outdoor) models of the housing include a sunshield to prevent sun glare. The housing glass is self cleaning, so the camera's image capture is always sharp. A low power window defroster operates continuously to keep the housing glass free of fog in cold or humid conditions for optimal camera performance in all environments and climates.

The UHI/UHO Series is available now and replaces HSG9483/HSG9583 housings. For more information on Bosch's UHI/UHO indoor/outdoor camera and lens housings, please visit www.boschsecurity.us or call 800-289-0096.
